Made in Grey Britain

project introduction

Made in Grey Britain is a collaborative printed cashmere garment collection with world renowned cashmere producers Johnstons of Elgin. The collection consists of six hand screen printed cashmere jumper designs inspired by Britain today; industries in decline, industrial manufacture, the generation spanning productivity of the Johnstons of Elgin mill in Hawick and its commitment to create beautiful things at all points throughout its history, utilitarian objects that have died, been dismantled and resurrected on the garments they were once used to create therefore The Made in Grey Britain tag is a more thought provoking idiom and the collection addresses how existing textile craftsmanship can be utilised in novel and innovative ways. The print processes used have been extensively developed to be indiscernible in handle, further refining and building on existing research towards printing a cashmere garment in the round. The process is rigorously tested to capture accurate results in colour, handle, quality, finishing and shrinkage then accurately documented to ensure quality control in production. The collection was exhibited at Premium, Berlin in Hall 7 (Stylish Innovation Meets Fragile Strength) and featured in International articles including WWD Japan and Italian Vogue. In excess of 300 units were sold globally to buyers.
